WEDDING GIFT OF $30,000,000 FOR MRS. PLANT

NEW LONDON, June 18.—News of the secret wedding of Commander Merton P. Plant, the man whom Charles S. Mellen says is richer than the New Haven Railroad, and Mrs. M. C. Manwaring, divorced wife of the proprietor of the Overage Hotel at Waterford, brought a flood of congratulations to the couple today from all parts of the country.

The wedding was not supposed to take place until August, but the bride "just couldn't wait," so they surprised their friends and were secretly married at Merton House, Plant's magnificent home at the mouth of New London Harbor. After the ceremony Plant is reported to have given his bride a check for $30,000,000 as a wedding present.

A few relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Plant, the vicar and the Rev. Philip M. Karridge, rector of St. James Episcopal Church of New London, witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Benjamin H. Merrill, a justice of the peace. It is reported that the Rev. Dr. Karridge, an Episcopal minister, couldn't marry the couple as the bride is a divorcee.

The couple will not start on their honeymoon until after the close of the season of the Eastern Association in August. The bride is the daughter of the late John C. Mellen, a wealthy Bostonian, and the groom is the son of the late John C. Mellen, a wealthy Bostonian.

The bride's dress was gray, like the commander's, and set wide apart beneath a mass of curly hair. It was a beautiful but youthful and contrary, just as a bride's hair should be. Her hair is wavy and she has white frank like that which frequently and easily. She is plump and of about medium height. She is an out-of-door woman, a good golfer, as is the commander.

And there she stood, his scratching and his squinting little body attracted the other chicks, and they, with the instinct of the wild, began to peck at him. His peeps and uttering cries became fainter and fainter, until he was alone, and then he lay down, and so he was "put to sleep" the first time in local records where a chicken has been killed from kindness.

COLLEGE GIRL IS JOAN OF ARC IN THE WAKEFIELD STRIKE

The Wakefield strikers have a Joan of Arc today. She is a college girl, Miss Alvera Kilborn, and her appearance as an advocate of the strike was most dramatic.

Miss Kilborn, who is the twenty-year-old daughter of Mrs. George W. Kilborn of No. 72 West Chestnut street, mounted the stump at the field day and made a stirring speech, president of the Junior Class at Trinity College, Wakefield.

She is much interested in social conditions and work. She is getting ready for a trip abroad to study social conditions on the other side of the water.

Miss Kilborn said today: "I am in sympathy with the laboring class. I believe in a living wage, shorter hours of labor and better chances for their education."

"I was very much surprised to learn of the conditions that existed here when I returned from school. I am eager to investigate such conditions. I have not been home long enough to learn much about them. I am sure I will have something further to say on the subject."

Miss Kilborn's father gave the strikers free use of the field for their picnic, and over $200 was netted.

OCEAN LINERS IN CRASH; ONE GOES AGROUND

PORTLAND, Eng. June 18.—During the thick fog in the English channel today the North German Lloyd liner with between 50 and 400 persons on board, went ashore on the British coast near this point. The ship sent out a wireless call for help and assistance was sent. The liner was in the Mediterranean trade and was due to arrive at Southampton, England, tonight.

STEAMERS COLLIDE. COWEN, England, June 18.—The freighter Cogswood, owned by the Motor Company, put in here in a damaged condition today and reported that she had been in collision in English Channel with the liner of the Hamburg-American line. A heavy fog covered the Channel at the time of the accident. The Cogswood was struck below the waterline and her fore plates were twisted. After examination it was decided to put her into drydock.

REPORT IMPERATOR ASHORE. LONDON, June 18.—A Press Association dispatch from Hamburg reports that the Hamburg-American liner Imperator went ashore today in the fog. It was stated that the giant liner was not in a dangerous position, but that her departure for New York with passengers of the Kaiser Wilhelm, which was damaged in collision yesterday, would be delayed.

A later dispatch from the late of Wight said that the Imperator had passed Wight this afternoon. This led to a belief that the Press Association report was inaccurate.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Officials of the Hamburg-American line received advice today that the Imperator had sailed for America and was proceeding without accident. They believe the report that she had gone ashore was due to confusion over the fact that the liner was ashore near Cowen.

PLATES BENT AND TORN. SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. June 18.—Divers today made a minute examination of the hull of the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm II, which was in collision in the English Channel yesterday with the freighter Cogswood, and it was found that some of the important outer plates were bent and the water line had been bent, and torn.

More Than 1,000 GRADUATED AT HARVARD

Commencement Senior "Roasts" Aristocrat of Back Bay.

Who is the Beacon street aristocrat and Harvard graduate who was "roasted" from the Harvard Commencement platform in Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, today in the presence of all Harvard officers, the Governor, many Beacon street residents themselves, recipients of honorary degrees, and other men of note?

The "roasting" was done by James Parsons Clifford of New Haven, who had one of the senior commencement parts. His subject was "Boston as an Educational Asset."

After telling about the Beacon street aristocrat who had been at college when he "found down on Federal street, a little man who always works with his coat off."

But the aristocrat was "Paul-Boddy, petrimonious and baronous." As Clifford's audience progressed the dignified assembly wondered who these opposite types of Bostonians are.

Clifford said in part:

TO FIND CULTURE.
"And so, in speaking of Boston as an educational asset, the lecturer is sure to be not in the impersonal treatment of the statistics, but in the recalling of the personal relations with the instructors and the teachers in this university extension course. I came to Boston quite confident of the nature of the place and the Boston should live in the esteem of a well-rounded education."

"I know quite well that the intellectual world is bounded on the south by the Charles River, but that just across the river on a certain well known street, that runs parallel to it, it was to be found interesting people, people of good taste, culture and refinement who could do marvelous things in the way of educating one's better nature, improving one's character and polishing off one's rough corners."

"I was in the late Spring of the year that I as a freshman met that great instructor, this particular Bostonian had been born in Boston, educated at Harvard and for years had been numerous important positions."

HONORARY DEGREES CONFERRED

DOCTOR OF LAWS.

DOCTOR OF AGRICULTURE.
DAVID FRANKLIN HOUSTON, Secretary of Agriculture and Chancellor of Washington University.

DOCTOR OF MEDICINE.

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY.
City representative from the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences and candidate for a master's degree, named as "The Mexican War of 1846-47. A Tradition of Injustice."

He made comparison between that of the present Imbrosio, and regarding the latter said:

THE MEXICAN PEZZLE.
"To tempt and delay the day of reckoning by our acknowledgment of a dictator, would have been no real solution of the problem. Neither is occupying merely for commercial exploitation to be commended. In spite of some apparent mistakes in the course of President Wilson's degrees to the University of Cincinnati, has been at the bottom."

Honorary degrees were conferred and the exercises closed with the singing of the baccalaureate hymn, written by Philip Warren Thayer of Springfield, as follows:

HOXIE SCORED WHEN DIVORCE IS REFUSED

Despite the fact that his wife pleaded guilty to a serious charge in the Quincy Court, Ernest H. Hoxie of Randolph and Boston was denied a divorce from Nellie D. Hoxie by Judge Pierce in the Superior Court. Judge Pierce, in dismissing the bill, made some sharp criticisms of Hoxie and his attorney who was J. A. Kearney.

Hoxie stated that December 19, 1912, he applied in the Quincy court for a warrant for the arrest of his wife and Antonio Sousa, on a serious charge. In the Quincy court Mrs. Hoxie pleaded guilty, but substance testified.

Mrs. Hoxie testified that she received 150 from Sousa and gave it all to her husband. Mr. Hoxie later asked for $15 with which to pay a gas bill and she gave it to him. She said her husband some times gave her only twenty-five cents a week out of his pay, and often she could not get enough to eat or sufficient clothes to wear.

She said she was the only person without a warrant. Some of the Quincy court trial, at her husband's request, and that she also pleaded guilty at his request.

During the argument of counsel, when Attorney Kearney was calling attention to the fact that Mrs. Hoxie had pleaded guilty in the Quincy court, Judge Pierce suddenly interrupted him by saying: "Wouldn't it have been a kindly act to have told the wife that there would be no conviction unless she testified herself?"

An American Talk to Its Readers

Pure Food for Every Table in Boston

Of all the important results that publicity has produced, none stands out more prominently than that involving the purity of the food which is consumed daily by the people of Boston.

Because of fairly effective laws—but particularly because of their enforcement through publicity and the education of the consumer by the same agency—Boston is noted as a market which demands not only food of unquestioned excellence but one that knows how to discriminate as well.

And Boston American readers—through the education afforded them by the advertisements of manufacturers, who preach the pure-food doctrine—have been no small factor in building Boston's reputation along these lines.

The food manufacturer of today knows that he can advance no stronger selling argument for his product than to name the ingredients, describe the process of making and dwell truthfully upon the purity of this process.

Examples of this are to be seen at every hand. Witness the advertising of crackers, cereals and even sugar, in sealed packages—vegetables, soups, baked beans, milk, etc., in hygienically preserved form.

People cannot read these appetizing announcements without having a desire for such foods created, any more than they can escape the conviction that the advertised product is not only pure, but—on this score alone—to be preferred above the obscure brands.

One and all, food manufacturers who make Boston their market find the same basis of appeal. For it is the accepted and well-warranted belief that with Bostonians purity comes before palatableness—wholesomeness before flavor.

And that the American does more than accede to the pure food doctrine—more than merely approve this method of promoting the health of Boston's citizenship—is evidenced in the potency of its advertising columns as a means of advancing the trade of those who put forth meritorious products.

No better illustration of this is afforded than the month-in and month-out advertising patronage of concerns whose products have a nation-wide fame for wholesomeness and excellence of flavor.

The Boston American family of readers, therefore, are urged to read its food advertising carefully and continuously—even more so in the future than they have in the past.

In this—as well as in all other respects—the American publishes advertising that can be read and responded to with faith in the fact that it contains the most-to-be-desired offerings of the hour always.

Here are the names of the prominent local dealers of Food Products who have used the advertising columns of the AMERICAN during the last year:

W. & A. Bacon Company.
T. D. Baker.
C. D. Cobb.
Cobb, Aldrich Company.
Cobb, Hersey Company.
John T. Connor Company.
The Ginter Company.
E. E. Gray Company.

Great Ceylon Tea Company.
Gridley's Bakery.
H. P. Hood & Sons.
Wm. Horriggan.
Houghton & Dutton Company.
The Alden Spear's Sons Company.
Importers Branch, Ltd.

L. K. Liggett Company.
Mansion House Ice Cream Company.
Page & Shaw.
S. S. Pierce Company.
W. D. Quimby & Company.
C. L. Richardson.
Riker-Jaynes Company.
Weston's Bakery.

The American's readers, distinctly home-loving people, have not only the means but the inclination to buy, and food products is but one of the lines of advertising they are advised to read.

Not only is the practice pleasurable and profitable, but widely informative, because the American is one of the chosen mediums of progressive local merchants and foremost American manufacturers where Boston is concerned.

ENGLISH CREEK ROOSEVELT AS HE SAILS HOME

SOUTHAMPTON, June 18.—A warm farewell was given today to Colonel Roosevelt, who sailed for New York on the Imperator after a whirlwind visit of less than ten days in Europe to attend the wedding of his son Kermit.

Just before the Imperator sailed, Colonel Roosevelt told the AMERICAN representative that he would not be a candidate for Governor of New York. "I absolutely refuse to run for the governorship," he said.

Crowds cheered the former President in London, and there was a friendly demonstration in the streets and on the pier when the Colonel landed the big Hamburg-American liner. He was accompanied by his son, Philip Roosevelt, of New York, and his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who came to the pier to bid her father farewell.

Colonel Roosevelt was accompanied to Southampton by Arthur Lee, a lifelong member of Parliament, who was the American statesman's host over the week-end.

Before going on board the boat train Colonel Roosevelt issued a brief statement thanking the British people for their kind treatment.

"I've had a jolly time," he said. "The Colonel and Lord Bessford passed his clapped hands for the newspaper photographers. Colonel Roosevelt was looked in good health despite the throat weakness, which will prevent him from taking an active part in the approaching political campaign in the United States.

"If anyone expected me to go into the campaign vigorously, I am disappointed now," said he. The Colonel has been warned by his British friends of the famous throat specialist, that his larynx will not stand any severe strain. A slight business trip to the colonies was, but he, "economies" hurried when he tried to speak loud.

Struck by Auto, Dies in Hospital

George C. Wiggins, thirty, of Boston, who was fatally injured on the road between Essex and Haverhill when hit by an automobile, died at the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The annual outing of the Bay State Automobile Association, which was held at the beach last two days, was productive of no end of good fellowship and pleasure. The expenses of the outing were such as will give life in the summer of those who had the pleasure of participating. In the same and President Stevens and Chairman Walter Williams of the committee on arrangements are today receiving the congratulations and thanks of the one hundred or more persons who participated in the outing.

Barney Oldfield was greatly disappointed owing to his inability to carry out his contract by racing against Beachy to his stately at Haverhill on Tuesday and Wednesday. The big man who has made "to do or die" as the saying is in this event by the inability of Beachy to get the aeroplane repaired in season for the exhibition presented to the holding of the same. Barney said he will come to Haverhill with Beachy later and he was greatly disappointed in his experience this time, as he has always found Bostonians were his warm friends.

The semi-annual meeting of the Society of Automobile Engineers will be held at Cape May, New Jersey, June 22 to 24, at which time the motor vehicles will discuss the various angles of motor construction and incidentally endorse the measures prepared for them by the committee on arrangements.

Cayuga County, Ohio, will add sixty miles of rural brick road to its ten miles of similar pavement according to the 1914 road improvement plan authorized by County Engineer Strohmeier, this strengthening its distinction of being the best paved rural district of any similar area in the world.

A minimum width of sixteen feet has been selected for roads to be laid during the coming summer and the entire expenditure, including bridges, etc., will be somewhat in excess of $500,000.

AMERICAN MAN SENDS
UNCENSORED DETAIL
OF VILLA'S REVOLT
By H. STANSBURY.

Villa had been spurred to precipitate action because he did not approve of the Revolution and he chafed at the activity of an alleged political cabal.

Resumption of the proceedings at Niagara Falls tomorrow was eagerly awaited in all circles here. It was declared here that one of the men who would be proposed for the position of president in Mexico was Felipe Angeles, war secretary in Carranza's cabinet and now proceeding to Zacatecas with some of Villa's forces.

Villa is declared to approve of such a move, and some officials here today believed an armistice could be arranged between the contending forces if the Federal delegates would accept Angeles for their successor.

At the War Department it was rumored that suspicious actions by the Mexican troops near the vicinity of and practically surrounding Vera Cruz have been reported by General Funston.

General Funston's advice to the department stated that the Mexicans in the vicinity of the waters at Tular have adopted a menacing attitude, it was said.

General Funston has asked the Washington officials for permission to extend his lines and substantially reinforce them, and has warned them of the possibility of an attack. His requests have not been granted.

Count Hanna at Monterey reported that it was current gossip that Villa had handed his resignation to Carranza and was preparing to conduct a campaign independently of Carranza.

VILLA IS H. H. HOFF. General Villa now is in the hope of the administration in saving the mediation negotiations from total collapse and the overthrow of General Carranza is said to be very welcome.

It was made clear at the White House that President Wilson has the highest confidence in Villa and that the American government agrees to the proposal for an armistice as soon as he becomes the successor of Carranza.

There is open rejoicing among administration officials over the reported downfall of Carranza, who, it is well understood, never has been particularly friendly toward the United States, even when it was recognized.

Sayre on Still Hunt for $2,000,000 Fund to Assist Williams

CHICAGO, June 18.—Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of President Wilson, has arrived here from Minneapolis on a more or less still hunt for $2,000,000.

Thousands of Police Guard the King at the Races

If He Would Think Less About Race Horses and More About Women and Their Rights He Would Need Fewer Policemen, and NOT Be Made Ridiculous

Copyright, 1914, by the Boston Company

England will give the vote to women eventually—and intelligent Englishmen KNOW it.

Knocking women down, stepping on their faces, kicking in their ribs, locking them up in prison will not settle a question that is alive, and that will live UNTIL IT IS SETTLED.

The King and the Queen, descendants in power of those who fought vigorously against the idea of VOTES FOR MEN, go to the races, and a thousand policemen go along to protect them.

If the King would read the history of his ancestors, if he would think over the stupid fight that they made AGAINST MEN'S RIGHTS, and realize how vainly they strove to keep the vote and the right to govern themselves FROM MEN, he would see the foolishness of trying to keep the vote from women in this day.

It is suggested—in some cases, to their disgrace, by clergymen—that the best plan is for the English to let the women die in prison.

"Let them die, that will settle them," say some of the reverend gentlemen, and some of the bull-necked Englishmen.

But the clergymen, like the King, would see things more clearly if they would look back into history.

The King would find out by reading a few chapters that brutality does not keep MEN from getting liberty when they start out to get it.

And the reverend clergymen would learn, by reading a few chapters also, that death does not discourage or frighten WOMEN when they are determined.

There were Romanes who thought they could discourage Christian women by burning them alive, or throwing them into the arena with wild beasts.

BUT THEY DID NOT DISCOURAGE OR FRIGHTEN THOSE WOMEN.

The gentlemen who burned Joan of Arc at Rouen thought they had settled something. But they hadn't.

And they did not FRIGHTEN her.

The women in England, making the fight for liberty, the women who cause the timid King to take a thousand policemen with him when he goes to watch a horse race, are worthy followers of the Christian martyrs, women with all the courage and spirit of Joan of Arc AND WITH A GREAT DEAL MORE INTELLIGENCE THAN THE CHRISTIAN MARTYRS AND JOAN OF ARC COMBINED.

There is ONE question only in connection with this great movement in England, and this is the question:

When will the Englishmen get the fog out of their brains and realize that they have got to give the women the right to govern themselves?

Nothing is more stupid than the notion that brutality, with its war cry "Let them die!" would frighten the women and drive them from their purpose.

A few murders of women will show the English gentlemen, including the King, just what women CAN DO when they are aroused.

When the men of England made up their minds that they would rule themselves the King HAD to give his consent.

Shooting and jailing would not answer.

When the men of America made up their minds to rule themselves independently of England, the English King HAD to give his consent. Hessians could not settle the question.

Now that the women of England have made up their minds to govern themselves, to control their property, their children, and their own bodies, NO BRUTALITY, NO POLICEMEN, nothing but JUSTICE will solve the problem.

Some of the early Christians were fastened to posts, soaked with oil and used as torches for illumination purposes. That did not kill Christianity.

There is in this suffrage movement just as much devotion, just as much determination, just as much noble courage as there was among the early Christians.

And the women will win.

It is for the men of England to make up their minds HOW LONG they are to be made ridiculous, how long their silly King is to shiver every time a lady bobs up in front of him, how long the men of England are to remain in the idiotic mood which says:

"You are our mothers, but not intelligent enough to share in the government of the country whose citizens you create."

One Way Lowering of High Cost of Living Is Defeated

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—This is an appeal to you to help us adjust a matter that is of vital interest to the people of Boston and vicinity. The tariff, we believe, was taken off meat products from foreign countries with the single object in view of lowering the high cost of living in the United States. This object is being defeated in many ways, one of which is the refusal of the largest packing houses in Canada to ship cars of cured meats to this market, on account of the inadequate mode of government inspection prevailing here.

As the Bureau of Animal Industry and its laboratory for inspection of cured meats here it is necessary to send cars of perishable meat until samples are sent to New York city to be analyzed in the government laboratory there, and then returned. These samples are analyzed and then returned at the expense of the New York inspectors, which, in many cases, is several days when goods are really released to the purchaser. This is a great inconvenience to merchants in Boston handling this line of food products, saying nothing of the monetary loss which is entailed in depreciation of value, and time of retention.

At the present time we have a car of meats which arrived here from Toronto five days ago and is still being held awaiting report from New York. This state of affairs is very damaging to both buyer and seller, and has been pronounced by us as being in a small town or village, but it is unbearable that they should continue in a large commercial center like Boston. We hope by bringing this matter to the notice of the press, through your valuable publication, it may have the attention of those in authority, and in a manner becoming our city. Thanking you in advance, we remain, yours very truly,

Business Dress—Girls Have a Habit of Wearing Their Best to Work and Are Surprised if They Are Criticized by Those Who Know

By DOROTHY DIX

I HAVE received an interesting communication from a working girl who wants to know whether a business woman must invariably belong to the plain shirt-waist-and-skirt brigade in order to avoid criticism about her clothes. The young woman writes:

"I am a business girl of twenty-four and maintain that business women have little opportunity to express their individuality outside of working hours; that a business woman's friends, male and female, are usually the business people whom she meets at her place of work, or on the street during the lunch hour, or mornings and evenings when she is going to and from her work. Therefore, it being generally conceded that every woman particularly desirous to look her best when she meets her friends, it is not rather unjust for one to be made to feel inappropriately dressed and well-to-do to ridicule, if one (being a woman) invests a string of beads in her monies with a very becoming blue blouse is made, which she wears to work, thus plainly displaying the uniform shirtwaist and skirt."

"For myself I know that I am just as neat, just as efficient and more pleasant dressed in my becoming blue blouse and beads as in Miss Prim in her unbecoming shirtwaist and skirt at the next business AND—oh, the satisfaction that if I do meet Mr. May, Mr. Tom, Dick or Harry, there will be a moment's diversion from business and business thoughts in the apparent approval of my looks, and latest model regalia."

"There are no stereotyped rules and regulations governing the manner of dress of church attendants or society maids and matrons. Why should the business woman be branded by their clothes?"

"This is an interesting letter because it represents the eternal feminine pleading for trills and frills that will not be denied and will have them in season or out of season, appropriate or inappropriate."

But my correspondent's logic is not sound, she contends that a business woman has a perfect right to wear her most becoming flattery to work because she has no other place to wear it. On the same

Above the Stars—The Lesson of the Empress Disaster

THE Empress of Ireland tragedy has turned our thoughts again to the brave men who habitually carry their heads above the stars. Every great disaster in which men are lost does this. We are, we cannot help but see, the substitutes to which our human nature surrenders in the hour of catastrophe and sudden death. If business stands revealed, no other does splendor.

There is no wreck at sea, no railway accident, no fire where men and women are trapped, no colliery explosion, when the divinity within us does not break through its mortal wrapping of humanity and assert itself for what it is—immortal love.

The moment of physical danger tests us and sets us out and shows what number of persons we are. Moral or immoral qualities, hidden from every human eye, leap into activity and the soul is bare. The coward stands revealed and the brave man and the unselfish, the man who has nerve and the man who has merely nerves, the man who is man at all, and the man whose moral maskwork and shirking dignity. The crisis brings the secret thing to light.

When the first paragraph about the sinking of the Empress of Ireland was printed, the name of Sir Henry John Kerr appeared in the list of passengers. It was not known whether he was saved or not. I knew that there was no knightman of title of that name, and I leaped to the conclusion that Sir Henry Kerr was meant.

And I said in my own home, "You may be pretty sure that Sir Henry Kerr is drowned. And there will be no scandal connected with his death, either. He will not force his way into a boat while there is a human being who wants the place. He will be a good deal cooler on the panic-stricken deck than he used to be at a public meeting in the old St. James's Palace."

When the news of his cool gallantry came, the story of Sir Henry Kerr's own life-belt upon another man and calmly going to his death, my words were vindicated to me. I had rightly divined the soul of the man.

Sir Henry Kerr was at one time member of Parliament for a city in which I lived. I was one of his political opponents. There was some talk at one time of my contesting the constituency against him. If he were still in politics and I was yet an Englishman, I should still be his opponent still.

But I knew the man. And I know his type, men too high and fine and proud to struggle and scuffle for their place with the men who have done their work and kept their hands clean and carried their heads above the stars and are not afraid to die.

These men have formed a habit. The habit is no more a habit—it is the man. And such a man cannot be "hunted" by the unexpected, cannot be shaken out of himself by disaster. You cannot unman him.

What is the great outstanding marvel revealed in the Empress of Ireland disaster, in stories of flood and flame, and of the martyrs of science and the heroisms of every day?

Not the readiness on the part of some hero to throw his life away in the attempt to save a man or woman strange to him; not the absolute certainty that there is no hero there; but the fact that this hero is of the same flesh and blood and human spirit as everybody else, that he has come out of the crowd and will fall back into the crowd; and that never again leaps from the stroke of flint so steel more inevitably than sacrifice, civility and heroism leap from the contact of big danger and big need.

The simple fact is that we are brave all our life without knowing it. It has become instinctive with us. There are thousands of years of hereditary courage in our blood. As none of us have loved and lost, have formed the habit of carrying their heads above the stars.
